BACKGROUND

India, a land steeped in spiritual heritage, draws millions of pilgrims and spiritual seekers annually to its multitude of sacred sites. Spiritual tourism can contribute significantly to a destination's economic growth. Pilgrims and visitors tend to spend more on accommodation, transportation and local goods compared to conventional tourists. This influx of revenue can invigorate local economies, support infrastructure development and create employment opportunities.

However, several challenges impede the realization of spiritual tourism's full potential. Infrastructure deficits, inadequate accessibility and poor facilities can deter visitors from embarking on religious journeys. Moreover, concerns about overt commercialization and insufficient preservation of sacred spaces can alienate both local spiritual communities and tourists.

Recognizing the significant economic and cultural benefits spiritual tourism can bring to the country, Prime Minister, Shri Narendra Modi introduced schemes such as PRASAD (Pilgrimage Rejuvenation and Spiritual Augmentation Drive) in 2015. Under the PRASAD Scheme, 41 religious sites from 25 states were identified for development in the country.

Focusing on developing pilgrimage sites across India, Modi's efforts to promote spiritual tourism were part of a broader strategy – to boost tourism in the country and showcase India's cultural and spiritual diversity to the world.
